COURSE SYLLABUS

BUSI 343
EMPLOYEE AND LABOR RELATIONS

COURSE DESCRIPTION

A comprehensive study of collective bargaining; the negotiation process and the scope of labor contracts to include the day-to-day administration of contracts; the major substantive issues in bargaining to include their implication for public policy; and the problem of dealing with labor conflict.

RATIONALE

Today’s global economy presents many challenges and opportunities for both employers and employees. The effective management of human resources is critical to maintaining an organization’s competitiveness. Recognition of and respect for the legitimate interests of both labor and management are an important step in building and maintaining work relationships capable of adapting to change in the competitive environment facing most organizations.
