QUALITATIVE METHODS OF RESEARCH

COURSE DESCRIPTION
This course examines qualitative methods used in educational research, focusing primarily on participant-observation, asking questions, writing field notes, and on the transformation of these primary field data into written ethnographic documents.

RATIONALE
The research problems addressed by the process of educational research often present a more complex problem than the use of traditional quantitative research approaches can satisfy. As a result of this complexity, there is the need for alternate ways to answer research questions. Qualitative research (as a paradigm of thought and as groups of methods and approaches) seeks to provide this alternate approach. Christian educational researchers must develop a diverse understanding of research methodologies and approaches to best apply the proper method in the practice of educational research.

A. Textbook readings and presentation

B. CRC Description
   As the first activity in this course, please read the syllabus and Student Expectations. After reading the syllabus and Student Expectations, the student will then complete the related checklist found in Module/Week 1.

C. Class Introductions
   In Module/Week 1, the candidate will create a brief personal biography introducing himself/herself to the instructor and to the rest of the class. This brief biography should include the following items: degree that the candidate is pursuing, the candidate’s current job, and a recent picture. The candidate may add any other details that he/she wishes.

D. Discussion Board Forums (7)
   The candidate will complete discussion forums in two parts. First, the candidate should post a new thread in response to the provided prompt. Then, the candidate should reply to the specified number of classmates. Threads should be posted by the end of Thursday of the week the forum is assigned and replies should be posted by the end of Sunday of the same week.

E. Reading Summary
   In Module/Week 1, candidates will have the opportunity to practice their APA writing and formatting skills through composing clear and concise chapter summaries for their assigned reading that week. The summaries should follow the format provided in the course and should clearly reflect APA style and writing.

F. Research Plan Overviews
Throughout the course, candidates will build a preliminary research plan that will be submitted in three different stages (weeks 2, 4, & 6). Once completed, this plan will be the template for the final research prospectus.

G. Five Approaches Table

In Module/Week 3, candidates will complete a chart that will allow them to define, explain, and discuss five major qualitative research methods.

H. Article Critiques (2)

During Modules/Weeks 3 and 5, candidates will read and critique an article based on the information provided in chapter 5 and the appendices of the textbook. The critique should be a double-spaced review of the study’s purpose, theory, methods, and major findings. Both critiques should also follow APA style and should match the formatting guidelines provided.

I. Field Notes Interviews

Candidates will practice collecting data in the field through conducting two interviews with individuals who have earned a doctorate degree in the field of education. Each interview should be kept at about a 1-hour time limit and should be audio recorded for official transcription, which will be submitted. An interview template is provided with a detailed list of questions. The completed interview templates will be submitted in Module/Week 7; however you must conduct AT LEAST ONE INTERVIEW by the end of Wednesday of Module/Week 5.

J. Research Prospectus

Candidates will prepare a research prospectus based on their research plan, reading, and course work. A draft of the Research Prospectus will be submitted by the end of Wednesday of Module/Week 8 through the Research Prospectus Draft Check SafeAssign link. SafeAssign is a plagiarism detection tool that will allow candidates to view the originality reports for their papers and make revisions as necessary before the final version is due. The completed research prospectus will be submitted by the end of Module/Week 8.
