POLITICS, STRATEGIES, AND INITIATIVES OF COMMUNITY ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

COURSE DESCRIPTION
This course will provide an overview of theoretical and practical approaches to community economic development.

RATIONALE
Whether in strong economic times or economic downturns, the lifeblood of a community is economic development. Accordingly, effective community leaders, whether leading a village, city, or county, need to understand not only the history of economic development but also key principles and strategies to help attract businesses and assist in bolstering the economic life of an area.

D. Article Reviews (2)

E. Public Administrator Generated Information on Economic Development

For this portion of the course, the student has the option of doing any one of the following exercises:

Option 1:

The student may conduct 2 interviews with individuals employed by an organization or community in economic development. Each interview must observe a 30-minute time limit. Present all recorded interviews as audio files and provide a written time gauge that locates the interview question responses; provide a written bio for each interviewee and a summary of each interview.

Option 2:

The student will conduct an exhaustive review of pertinent public sector generated data to scrutinize indicators of economic development status for the chosen jurisdiction. Present the data in a 20–30 minute audio embedded PowerPoint presentation.

Option 3:

The student may conduct the combined activity of at least 1 public administrator interview accompanied by the review of select public sector generated data. With this option, you will integrate qualitative (interview information) and quantitative (statistical data on development status) to approximate the typical approach to applied research and display the information you gain in a 20–30 minute audio embedded PowerPoint to satisfy this portion of course requirements.

F. Annotated Bibliography
The student will be expected to submit an Annotated Bibliography. These sources must provide the academic and research support for the Economic Development Analysis and Proposal. The bibliography will require that the student find and annotate 25 sources. Sources can include the various journal articles that have been assigned as part of the readings throughout the course. Additional journal resources can be found through Liberty University Online’s Research Portal.

This assignment will specifically target the situation of an American city, town, or county.
