An online version of the Academic Catalog is published one time per academic year. As changes occur during the academic year, the online catalog is updated. The regulations, programs, courses, personnel, and costs listed in the catalog are subject to change after publication of the online catalog through established procedures. In the event of a discrepancy between a print-on-demand hard copy of the academic catalog where an online version also exists, the online version of the catalog takes precedence. It is the student's responsibility to ensure that he or she is using the correct catalog.

The University reserves the right to change the calendar; fees; degree program requirements; rules regulating University admissions, registration, and graduation; and any other regulations affecting the student body without notice except in the case of archived catalogs. The Office of Institutional Effectiveness and Research reserves the right to edit the catalog as necessary. Changes shall go into effect whenever the proper authorities determine and shall apply to current and prospective students.
