

General Information

To maintain F-1 status, international students must register for a full-time course load. Full-time at the doctoral level requires six (6) hours per semester, three (3) hours of which may be online. Students are expected to be enrolled at the beginning of each semester. However, due to the late registration period of many doctoral intensive courses, doctoral students on F-1 visa status are required to submit this form before January 1st and July 1st to declare their enrollment plans. After submitting this form, students may change which courses they will take without completing a new form, but they must still meet the residential requirement. At least one residential course must be taken during the regular spring semester (JAN-MAY) and during the fall semester (AUG-DEC).

Indicate below how you plan to meet the residential requirement for the next semester:

FALL Semester Enrollment Options - August 1st – December 31st (pick one)

- 3 credit Fall semester-long residential course
- 3 credit fall intensive course (September – December)

SPRING Semester Enrollment Options - January 1st – May 31st (pick one)

- 3 credit Spring semester-long residential course
- 3 credit spring intensive course (January – April)

Please note that students may take an unlimited number of online courses each semester. However, only (3) online hours will count towards the total of (6) hours required by US Citizenship and Immigration Services each semester to maintain F-1 status.
