

Liberty University Blog Policy

- I. Purpose of blogs on University websites
 - a. The purpose of providing blog functionality on Liberty University's websites is to foster internal and external communication about topics relating to the University.
- II. Bloggers and Blog Publishers
 - a. Permission to create blogs is given to academic deans and administrators. They may in turn grant permission to persons in their departments as they deem necessary.
 - b. Each Blogger and their Blog Publisher are responsible for the content appearing in their blogs. Students may not be Blog Publishers.
- III. Topics encouraged in blogs
 - a. Academic subjects, research, etc.
 - b. Spiritual life.
 - c. Campus life & campus events.
 - d. Athletics (most relevant within athletic departments).
- IV. Topics prohibited in blogs
 - a. Topics inconsistent with the University's mission and doctrinal statement.
 - b. Foul or abusive language.
- V. Blog locations
 - a. Links to blogs should not appear on the official page or navigation for a department, except for a dean/administrator's blog or featured blog, if desired.
- VI. Submitted comments
 - a. Blog authors may choose to turn the comment functionality on or off for their blog. All comments must be approved by a Blog Publisher before they are posted.
 - b. If the Blog Publisher chooses to accept comments for a blog, he is responsible to review the comments and approve them to be posted. The Blog Publisher is also responsible for the content of the approved comments.
